

ABSTRACT

An improved electric motor cooling construction where the motor stator is contained within the motor housing. The motor covers and motor housing are designed to provide direct increased airflow to the motor stator, and coil windings to provide better airflow through the motor resulting in improved cooling.